PREPARING FOR AN ADVANCE.

TO MEET CHINESE AT LANGSTAN.

The British and American Troops Co-Operating--Many Conflicting Reports From Pekin--Foreigners Running Out of Ammunition--Also Short on Food--The Legations Still Being Defended.

By Wire to the Telegram.

Tien-Tsin, July 30.—A messenger from Pekin brings what is considered as authentic news to the effect that firing ceased on July 16th, according to mutual agreement. The British and American troops are said to be getting in shape to advance on 48 hours' notice. They will make a demonstration towards Langstan, where, according to information received by Russians and Japanese, the Chinese are preparing to resist.

Many conflicting reports come from Pekin. It is rumored that the foreigners now have only 25 rounds each of ammunition. They have been using about 60 rounds each daily.

CHINESE ATTACK CEASED.

Washington, July 30.—The State Department has received a dispatch from Consul Towle, at Chefoo, saying the Chinese ceased their attack on the 12th. The body of the murdered German minister, Von Kettler, is said to have been saved. The Austrian, Italian Dutch and Spanish legations have been destroyed. The French legation was only partially destroyed.

A letter from the Japanese legation at Pekin says ten battalions of Chinese shelled the legations incessantly from June 20th to July 17th. The legations of the German, Russian, American, British and Japanese are still defended. The Japanese say they have food for only six days longer and but little ammunition.

JOINT CANVASS COMING TO A CLOSE.

The Candidates at Jamestown Saturday. Will Speak in Greensboro Tonight.

The legislative and county candidates were at Jamestown Saturday, completing their joint canvass, with the exception of their appointment in Greensboro tonight. The debate Saturday was pretty lively, both sides making strong efforts to capture what they all want—votes.

Fom the temper of the crowd, Democratic stock is apparently up in that section. The Democrats of Jamestown are confident of carrying the township.

Tonight the candidates will close the canvass with a joint debate in the court house. It is the first time the Republicans have ever dared to face their Democratic opponents in Greensboro, and an interesting debate may be expected.

Gave Him a Rising Vote of Thanks.

Saturday afternoon Rev. Livingston Johnston went down into the lower part of the county and addressed a crowd of over 500 people on the dispensary question. He was given the closest attention, and when he finished speaking the people gave him a rising vote of thanks.

The people of that section are enthusiastic in their support of the dispensary as against saloons. Mr. Johnson was told that the voters in that locality who will cast their ballots against the dispensary may be counted on one's fingers.

But Few Challenges.

The registrars for Thursday's election were at the polling places Saturday for the purpose of receiving and hearing challenges of the right of persons to vote. So far as is known, very few challenges were made in this county. There were none in Greensboro except in precinct No. 3, where several negroes were challenged.

The law allows challenges to be made on election day.

At the Presbyterian Church Yesterday.

Rev. W. A. Gillon, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Lexington, preached two good sermons at the First Presbyterian church of this city yesterday. He was heard by good congregations. Mr. Gillon is a preacher of force and power, of pleasing and attractive delivery. Greensboro Presbyterians will be glad of an opportunity of hearing him again.

KING HUMBERT ASSASSINATED.

Italy's Monarch Falls a Victim of the Anarchists—The Country in a State of Revolution.

By Wire to the Telegram.

London, July 30—King Humbert, of Italy, has been assassinated and the country is ablaze with excitement. The assassination has thrown Italy into an apparent state of revolutisn.

The mad purpose of the anarchists to overthrow the empire now seems nearer accomplishment than at any time since the troubled reign of King Humbert began. The telegraph offices have been seized by troops and every effort is being made to prevent the seriousness of the situation from becoming known to the outside world.

King Humbert's successor, Victor Emanuel, is now on his way to Rome. The Queen acts as regent.

There are hints that there was a political motive behind the assassination. A dispatch says the assassinator, Bres, rushed through the crowd and raised a revolver. Persons in the crowd attempted to seize the weapon, but Bresi fired before they could do so.

Gen. Princeloo Surrenders.

By Wire to the Telegram.

London, July 30.—Gen. Roberts reports that Gen. Princeloo, with whose forces Gen. Hunter had been engaged for three days, has surrendered with 5,000 men. The surrender took place at Neauport.

Attempt on the Shah's Life.

By Wire to the Telegram

Paris, July 30.—It is rumored this afternoon that an unsuccessful attempt has been made to assassinate the Shah of Persia.

The Cone Circular.

To the Editor of the Telegram:

No one denies Mr. Moses Cone's right to a voice in the public affairs of Greensboro. But, since he is not raising a family in Greensboro and has excluded the sale of liquor from Proximity and Blowing Rock, his summer residence, and insists on reopening the saloons, we do claim the rightto criticise the inconsistentcy of his position.

It, the circular, merely stated a few facts, which as yet have not been denied. The only denial was as to a statement that was not made in the circular. If Mr. Cone or his friends will come forward and prove that the statements in the circular are untrue, ample apology will be made, I doubt not, to Mr. Cone for the unintentional injustice. His intended establishment of a wholesale liquor house in Greensboro has never yet been denied. If such was Mr. Cone's purpose, his opposition to the dispensary is easily accountable for.

Again we say there was nothing abusive or disrespectful to Mr. Cone in the circular. It is agreed that Mr. Cone's coming to Greensboro was helpful to the business interests of Greensboro, but we presume he would not have put out his money in Greensboro and vicinity if he had not thought it a good business investment. Per contra the citizens of Greensboro voted a tax to open up Summit avenue, not because it would help Mr. Cone, but would be a mutual benefit to Mr. Cone and Greensboro. J. R. WHARTON.

A Republican Who Can "Figure."

It often depends altogether upon the state of a man's feelings as to how he regards the result of an election. An illustration of this occurred yesterday, when an ardent Republican of this city took the Charlotte Observer's forecast of Thursday's elcction, and changing the estimated vote in a number of counties, figured it out that Adums and a fusion Legislature would be elected by a majority of 96,000. This is a change of only 138,000 votes from the Observer's carefully prepared forecast.

Business Houses Will Close Election Day.

The banks and business houses, both wholesale and retail, have agreed to close on election day, thus allowing the business men and their employes to devote the day to working around the polls. This shows that the people of Greensboro are thoroughly interested in the result of the election, and this action cannot fail to have a good effect.

BARRELS OF HANNA'S MONEY.

FUSIONISTS HAVE STRUCK OIL.

They Hope to Buy Enough Votes to Give Them Control of at Least One Branch of the Legislature—Judge Ewart for the Amendment—"The Faithful" Held a Sunday Caucus at Populist Headquarters—A Populist Says He Has Prepared a False Statement Concerning the Democrats.

Special Correspondence of the Telegram.

Raleigh, July 30.—Senator Butler and Holton Saturday evening got out a special edition of the Caucasian, which is the fusion organ for all that part of the State east of Greensboro, and which they appear to be editing jointly.

The Populists had all their county tickets printed here, and sent them out. They were then told by their attorneys, John W. Graham and W. J. Peele, that the tickets did not conform to the legal requirements, and therefore all had to be printed anew. Friday and Saturday they were sent out; Butler sent with them a letter, telling about the mistakes, etc.

It was stated yesterday that Butler had sent out a circular letter to Populists, telling them that in case they did not want their neighbors to see their vote on the amendment, they had a right to vote vote a folded ballot. He tells this to induce persons who might be ashamed to openly vote against the amendment, to do so secretly.

The Fusionists must have abandoned hope of getting a majority of both branches of the Legislature, as they have concentrated all their forces upon the Senate. They publically concede the victory of the amendment and the State ticket. But they are up to any and all trickery and no Democrat shold fail to work and to vote. It may be stated with positiveness that the Fusionists have an immense campaign fund. They got it, or rather the Republican members of the firm furnished it, at the eleventh hour, but they have it just the same and are spending it freely.

The Democrats are not beating about the bush in this campaign. The "red shirts" are much in evidence in the southeast. Chairman Simmons says that the "red shirts" are merely uniformed members of clubs, and that far from causing or provoking disorder, they repress it. Their very presence has this effect. They have shot nobody, and done no mischief. Their organization is very open, not in the least secret, for secret political organizations or meetings are forbidden by law.

Saturday while on his way home after having made a political speech, J. M. Brown, member of the lower house from Stanley couuty, was badly hurt. His horse ran away and he was thrown out of a buggy. A telegram to his brother from Albemarle says he will be in bed some time.

The Legislature met again today. It is merely watching. It has a keen eye for fusion judges and fusion tricks. It is no secret that some of the fusion judges expected to be impeached. One of them said as much six weeks nr more ago, before the June session of the Legislature.

Judge Ewart is the last of the many Republicans who have declared for the amendment. The roll is a long one. So is the roll of the Populists who have taken a similar stand. The statement made months ago that the amendment was far above a mere party question has proved literally true. Neither the Repubticans nor Populists have been able to hold their people in line against it, try as they would.

A few days ago a Fusionist, who used to pass as a sort of preacher or exhorter, and who lives in this county, told a friend that he had prepared a big false statement about the Democrats which he had submitted to the leaders, who thought very much of it, and that it would be put in circulation Tuesday of this week, so it would be too late for the Democrats to disprove it.

At the Populist headquarters yesterday there was a conference of the faithful. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon Butler and Cy. Thompson and H. F. Seawell came down, and as they stood in the door Cy. had his hand on Butler's shoulder. Butler and Seawell stepped out and walked to the hotel, Stump Ashly, the Texan, with them. Next to walk away was was Cy., who was accompanied by Father Worth. It had been thought that the latter was too pious to go to headquarters on Sunday, but he was right there. Chairman Holton was on hand, too.

BURNED A CHURCH.

Enraged Citizens Wreak Vengeance on Sanctificationists.

By Wire to the Telegram.

Ducktown, Tenn., July 30.—Enraged people at Shoal Creek, N. C., between the Blue Ridge and the Tennessee line, today destroyed a sanctificationist church. Rev. Guy Bryan, a Methodist minister, preached to the crowd while the building was burning and encouraged its destruction.

The sanctificationists have made themselves very obnoxious in the community, being the source of much strife and trouble.

A HORRIBLE DEATH.

The Life Crushed Out of Little Walter Woodard While He Was at Play.

While playing around the premises of the Brooks Manufacturing Company this morning Walter, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Woodard, five or six years old, met a horrible death. He was on a pile of lumber by the A. & Y. railroad track, when he fell down an embankment and against one of the wheels of a box car, a a portion of the lumber falling on him. When he was taken out, dead, his body was terribly bruised and broken. A heavy plank had torn a gash across one side of his head and face, from which the blood streamed

When the terrible accident occurred the little fellow's sister, a year or so older, was on the opposite side of the box car, only a few feet away. If her brother made any outcry she failed to hear it, nor did she hear the noise made by the falling lumber. She finally missed her brother and went around the car in search of him. Seeing the overturned lumber, and fearing that he was under it, she went to her father's place of business for assistance.

When Mr. Woodard reached the place and removed the lumber the bruised and bleeding body of his son, who a short time before was full of life and vitality, met his gaze. It is not known just when the accident occurred, though it was probably an hour before the body was recovered.

The shock was terrible and Mr. and Mrs. Woodard are prostrated with grief.

The funeral will be held from Mr. Woodard's residence, on West Lee street, tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock. Interment will be made in Greene Hill cemetery.

AT THE END OF HIS ROW.

Marion Butler Makes a Plaintive Appeal for Money With Which to Buy Votes.

Marion Butler, chairman of the Populist State Executive Committee, has acknowledged that he has reached the end of his row, but he made the acknowledgement to the wrong person, so far as sympathy and help in his nefarious work is concerned.

By some means the name of Mr. Roscoe Ward, a staunch young Democrat of this city, has been enrolled at Populist headquarters in Raleigh, and he has been receiving an abundance of fusion literature and several circular letters. It is one of the letters which caps the climax and shows to what straits the fusion leaders are driven in their desperation. In a letter just received by Mr. Ward, Chairman Butler writes that "the State is safe if we can just hold our people together until the election." He goes on to say that it will take money to do this, and asks Mr. Ward to contribute $5 to the cause. "By doing this," he adds, "you will be striking a blow for human liberty and the rights of the poeople."

The letter closes with an appeal to "help save the State," and with a parting injunction to not fail to send the five.

WATCH THE TRADERS.

Republicans Making Efforts to Carry the Legislature by Trading--Let Every White Man be on Guard and See to it That the Entire Democratic Ticket is Elected.

TO VOTERS OF GUILFORD COUNTY:

We have reliable information that the Republicans are concentrating all their efforts to carry the Legislature. They have lost hope of defeating the amendment and our State and county tickets, but are making a desperate struggle to capture the legislative branch of the government. We learn that they have reached the point where they are willing to sacrifice everything in order to elect their candidates for the Senate and House of Representatives; and if they cannot elect their whole legislative ticket, they are willing to sacrifice their candidates for the House in order to obtain the Senator. If Starbuck, Douglas and Woods should be elected it would mean three votes for Marion Butler for United States Senator and would mean an attempt to set aside the will of the people as shown in passing the constitutional amendment.

So necessary is the Legislature to the great cause of white supremacy, and so desperate the enemy, that we think it our duty to put every white man on his guard against this scheme.

Let every white man see to it that the full strength of the white supremacy forces goes to our candidates for Senator and members of the House of Representatives. Discourage all attempts to trade or swap, and our entire ticket will be triumphantly elected.

We trust that every white man will give one day to this great cause and will stay at the polls until sunset of election day, working for the entire ticket and for the good of our grand old State.

Yours respectfvlly,
A. M. SCALES, Chairman.
Z. V. TAYLOR, Secretary.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT in MORALS.

Says if He Lived in Greensboro He Would Fight for the Dispensary.

This is to certify that a prominent cotton mill man who has been visiting Greensboro once or twice a month for the last ten years, and who is in no way biased on the dispensary question, made the following statement on the streets of Greensboro on Friday, the 27th inst., in the presence of one of the leading anti-dispensary workers and myself:

"To a visitor in Greensboro, stopping at the hotels, there has been a wonderful improvement in the morals of Greensboro under the dispensary system as compared with Greensboro under the saloon system. I have seen boys drinking in the hotel bars when there were saloons in Greensboro, and if I lived here, I would fight for the dispensary."

The above was his statement in substance. J. W. MERRITT.

DISPENSARY OR TEN SALOONS.

A CHOICE BETWEEN THE TWO EVILS.

The Election Will Determine Which System Shall Prevail—It Must be One or the Other—The Logical Arguments of President Hobbs and Rev. Mr. Smoot in Favor of the Dispensary as Against the Saloons.

In a communication in the High Point Enterprise Rev. M. A. Kelsey argues that the honest, clean, self-respecting man should not vote on the dispensary question at all, because a vote for the dispensary is a vote for the "perpetuation of the liquor traffic in the form of a municipal saloon." He admits that a vote against the dispensary is a vote for the re-establishment of eight or ten saloons. He is apparently opposed to curtailing the evil, and because the dispensary is not a good thing he is willing for Greensboro to be cursed with something ten times worse. He argues on the principle, "If you can't get a whole loaf, take no bread at all."

In contrast to this position are the following letters—one from President L. L. Hobbs, of Guilford College, and the other from Rev. T. A. Smoot, of Greensboro Female College:

"We may as well learn once for all that we cannot suddenly put an end to all evil. For one to decide that he cannot vote for the less of two evils when he knows there is no other alternative, is the same thing as to decide that the loss of two evils, for example, stealing, is no better for society than more stealing.

"Indeed, the dispensary is the first and a long step towards prohibition. The tendency of the dispensary is to prevent drinking, especially to prevent social drinking. The element of private gain being eliminated, there is no motive for creating a drinking class out of young men; and ultimately there will grow up sufficient sentiment against the traffic in whiskey to bring about and enforce prohibitory laws. Should there be some good prohibitionists who doubt this reasoning, it is certainly fair to ask such men to think clearly on the other side of the question, and ascertain whether the open saloon with all its dreadful corruption of young men tends in any way to bring about temperance sentiment or in any way prepares for prohibition.

"The question is a very simple one: How can I by my vote best serve the moral interests and the business outlook of Guilford county? I know we shall have the dispensary or the open saloon. I also know the open saloon is the most harmful institution that can be set up in Guilford county. The dispensary promotes whiskey drinking less than any other mode of selling strong drink that has been proposed or tried.

"Knowing these things, and knowing that young men are now growing up in Greensboro and surrounding country whose lives may be saved and turned to great usefulness in the future of the county by keeping the saloons closed, I cannot, I will not, on account of some sentiment about an ideal state of society, cast my vote to open the saloons in Greensboro,

"A few weeks ago, while stopping in a neighboring city, I was asked the question, 'Do you think it right to vote for a dispensary?' My reply was, and is: 'If the question be, shall we have a dispensary or absolute prohibition, then it is wrong to vote for a dispensary; but, if the question be, shall we have a dispensary or bar rooms, then it is right to vote for the dispensary.' The above statement appears to me to be logical and right, provided it can be proven that the dispensary in any way lessens the menace of whiskey to morals and business. From my observation it certainly does lessen this menace; hence, I conceive it my duty to vote for the dispensary in preference to the saloon. I am aware that some ministers conscientiously refuse to vote for the dispensary in this and other towsn, and I am certainly not making this statement condemnatory of their refusal, but merely to show that it is in keeping with the right to vote for it as a lesser of two evils. Per se, I am no friend to the dispensary, and I want to be clearly understood on that point, and if the issue were to become, 'dispensary or prohibition' I should throw my vote with all its power against the dispensay and for prohibition, as in the question, 'dispensary or saloon,' I threw it against the saloon and for the dispensary. In choosing between two evils, as we often have to do in a world of very imperfect moral conditions, I believe it right to choose the lesser. If you say, 'I'll choose neither,' that begs the question, for, under existing circumstances one must be. I shall always choose the lesser to the exclusion of the greater as long as I feel that God holds me accountable for every sin of ommission as well as commission. "T. A. SMOOT."

The Last Call.

Charlotte Observer.

This is the last week of the races. The white people are to carry the election next Thursday or they are not. That they will do so is beyond doubt. But every white man should be at the polls, in order that the majority shall be so large and substantial that there should be no doubt about its genuineness. This is the last call, and the white men of the State cannot fail to answer it.

GREAT DEMOCRATIC VICTORY.

THE OPPOSITION ALMOST WIPED OUT

Unbiased Estimates Prove Beyond Doubt That the Constitutional Amendment and the Democratic State Ticket Will Have an Overwhelming Majority—The Returns Show That the Republican Effort to Frighten the Unlettered White Man Into Voting Against His Party Was Without Result.

The Charlotte Observer.

The constitutional amendment restricting the franchise will be adopted by the people of North Carolina at the election to be held Tauresday by a majority of about 40,000, and at the same time Chas. B. Aycock and the other candidates on the Democratic State ticket will be elected by approximately the same majority.

This conclusion is based upon estimates of the vote to be cast in each one of the 97 counties of the State by correspondents who, in submitting these estimates, gave what they considered fair and impartial forecasts.

In summing up these 97 county returns it is found that in 19 counties the Republicans will likely receive majorities aggregating 6,600 votes, while of the remaining 78 counties, it is estimated that 75 will give the amendment and the Democratic State ticket majorities ranging from 100 to 2,800, with three as doubtful, the total being 49,200, and subtracting from this the Republican majority of 6,600, an estimated Democratic majority of about forty thousand is the result—to be more accurate 42,600.

Among other things brought to notice is the indication that the appeal of the Republican and Populist campaigners to the white voters of the middle and western sections of the State to go against the amendment for fear it would disfranchise those of them who cannot read, has utterly failed. The only evidence of the work on the illiterate white voters is given in a few counties where the expectation is that the amendment will run slightly behind the Democratic State ticket—from 50 to 100 votes. This loss, however, is probably offset in Republican counties in which the amendment will lead the vote.

From the estimate from Lumberton it is seen that if Robeson does what is expected of her she will be the leading "white supremacy" county in the State, a correspondent who knows what he is saying placing the majority at 2,800. Other counties which are expected to put up good majorities are Mecklenburg, which will likely give 2,500 to the amendment and the State ticket; New Hanover 2,500; Edgecombe 1,800; Cleveland, Union and Johnston 1,500 each; Richmond, Rowan and Nash 1,200; Wake and Scotland 1,100; Anson, Halifax, Rockingham, Stanly and Wayne 1,000 each.

Edgecombe, which has heretofore rolled up 400 or more Republican majority, is counted upon to make a change that will give the Democrats 1,000 majority. The new county, Scotland, with less than 1,300 registered voters, is down for 1,100 majority for her first trial at a State election.

On the fusion side of the calculation the old reliable Republican county of Mitchell stands out in bold relief with her usual majority of about 1,300 votes. Madison comes next with 1,000, while the other figures on that side are small and few between.

These figures are not claimed as near the the actual majority, for the returns on Thursday night may differ from them by several thousand votes, but unless all indications are badly at fault, those who figure on forty thousand majority for the amendment will not be far from and far between.

[Guilford's majority for the amendment and the ticket is estimated at 700. —Telegram.]

We are informed that Miss Davidson has addressed a letter to the Ladies Missionary Society of the Presbyterian church at this place stating the fact as we have given it. More New States.

Three territories, and all of them in the Southwest, are putting up strong claims for statehood before the Fifty-sixth Congress. These territories are New Mexico, Arizona and Oklahoma. Oklahoma is comparatively new, but the other two have had a long probation, because of the peculiar make-up of their population limit necessary to be reached in order to make statehood possible, 174,000 souls, a figure which Arizona has by no means reached. New Mexico is credited with a population of over 300,000, while Oklahoma has still more. The American Congress has at times been a little too free-handed, not to say reckless, in its state-making, and has in a few instances had occasion to do the repenting at leisure which is the usual consequence of foolish haste.

Paris takes the lead in the campaign against spitting in public. A committee of the Town Council has recommended the putting up of enamelled signs in the principal streets and parks with the inscription: "In the interest of the people and to avoid the spread of contagious diseases you are requested not to spit on the sidewalk."

YOUNG MEN AND POLITICS.

The old Roman adage of "old men for council and young men for war" does not in this good year of grace cut much figure in this land of the brave and the home of the free. While young men retain their usual value for martial purposes, they are not discriminated against when the councils of wisdom convene. On the subject of the young man in politics the Washington Post speaks:

As a target for political talk and a factor to be dealt with in campaign tactics the young man just passing his eventful majority, and ready to be gathered into the fold of one or the other party, has become more and more important. The advantages of "young blood" are frequently emphasized in the arena of vote getting. Young men are given the reins of party management, and sometimes, as was exemplified in Rhode Island a few months ago, when their elders are reluctant to yield, enter a vigorous struggle for supremacy. This is a signal of the advent of a new era. The people and their public servants are progressing to a stage where the ideas and standards of a quarter of a century are no longer dominant.

It is doubtful, however, if numerous accessions of young men to State and national legislative bodies is altogether a hopeful sign. Young men have served with distinction as legislators at different periods during the last century, there being no more conspicuous example than that of Henry Clay, who became speaker of the House when he was one of its most youthful members. Young men must come to the front, and old and tried leaders must give way with the mutations of politics, but it is the almost universal verdict that politics as a business is not profitable. This is true, most of all, for the latter generation of voters.

There is a phase of the question, however, which is proper cause for congratulation. Progress in political methods and in the selection of candidates which stimulates men to an interest in popular government, to attend primaries, to turn out on election day, and assist in keeping down abhorrent influences, is good. The agitation regarding the attitude of young men in the campaign, as far as it quickens zeal to that end, is altogether to be commended. We have enough ward heelers and professional politicians of immature years.

The last sentence speaks volumes. Not only do we have enough ward heelers and professional politicians of immature years, but we have altogether too many of that class of gentlemen of other ages. The greatest trouble with American politics is that the mass of people too easily recognize the spurious claims of any politician that happens along. All Americans should take an acute interest in politics, as citizens, but they should not take too unqualifiedly what politicians say, for their interests are nearly always selfish.

The Philadelphia Record thinks that, with the voluntary retirement of Mrs. Lease and the shelving of the "reckless statesman from Medicine Lodge," the Populists of bleeding Kansas have made an important step toward sanity.

A reading of Kaiser Wilhelm's address to a part of the German army on its departure to China impresses one with the idea that the utterance was inspired by the instincts of a savage brute.

The fact that this country must for some time to come, if not permanently, maintain a standing army many times larger than heretofore, with a consequent greatly increased expenditure of money, affords abundant reason for exercising greater care in granting pensions. The Pension Department has a man at its head who has the inclination to conduct affairs honestly and economically, if he were only allowed to do so.

The New Orleans affair would seem to indicate that we are not so far behind the ancient Chinese civilization after all.

China's New Rule.

Kwangsu, Emperor of China, has decided to abdicate and has appointed as his successor, Pu Chun. The retiring monarch is 29 years old, and has been on the throne since September 20, 1898. He is described as a rather weak character, and easily influenced. For some time, it is alleged, he has been under the thumb of the Dowager Empress, who for many years during his minority was regent. Her reassertion of authority over the emperor is said to be the result of the revolutionary (to Chinese principles) edicts which he promulgated under the influence of a progressive faction which favred western ideas. These edicts, which were promptly repealed when the Empress took the reins, related to the development of the empire and were, summarized: The establishment of a university at Pekin based upon European models; the selection of imperial clansmen and princes to travel abroad and learn something of the outside world; the Tsung li Yamen to report on the necessity of encouraging art, science, and improved agriculture; classical essays abolished as the leading feature of the civil service examinations; ministers ordered to report on the adoption of western arms and drill; agricultural schools ordered to be established; patent and copyright laws ordered; special rewards promised to inventors; officials ordered to encourage trade; the establishment of school boards in every city in the Empire ordered; a Bureau of Mines and Railroads established; commercial bureaus to encourage trade in Shanghai and Hankow ordered; six useless boards in Pekin abolished; the establishment of a naval academy ordered; the starting of newspapers, encouraged the learned to write on political topics "for the enlightenment of the authorities;" the general right to memorialize the throne granted; the system of fiscal reports or budgets, as in western countries, approved. The interest manifested in China's politics to-day is in proportion to that shown in its commerce, which is steadily growing with the rest of the world.

Elect by the People.

There is little doubt that the question of how United States Senators should be elected were submitted to the people for decision the present system would be given short shrift. Election by the state legislatures has come to be notoriously the occasion for the most pronounced and positive political corruption, almost everywhere and certainly under average circumstances. The people are always glad therefore to see the subject receiving attention in Congress. The House Committee on Elections last week reported favorably on the joint resolution for an amendment to the Constitution providing for the election of Senators by direct vote of the people. Such a measure could probably be carried in the House, but it is doubtful if it could make substantial headway in the Senate. The body meant to be thus purified will offer the most serious obstacle to the introduction of practicable means for such purification.

Going Abroad.

There has for some years been a steady decline in the cost of ocean travel. All can remember when there was so much money involved in a European trip that only the wealthy could indulge in that luxury. Of late years, however, the cost has been so reduced that such travel is quite common. But now, it is claimed, we are about to have a reaction in the direction of higher prices. The certainty that there will be heavy travel to the Paris Exposition is giving the steamship companies the coveted opportunity of bringing about something of a restoration of rates. Some of the lines have already made an advance, and the movement will of course under such circumstances be general. The rates will go up, as is stated, about ten per cent., which will still leave them below the basis of a few years ago.

More people over 100 years old are found in mild climates than in the higher latitudes.

The length of the world's railways is more than seventeen times the circumfererence of the earth at the equator.

It is asserted that the wine cellars of France contain alleged champagne enough to supply the world's demand for three years—nearly 150,000,000 bottles.

is where we stand in the lumber business. At the kicking post, as it were, in regard to prices.

First comes the owner of the timber. He just woke up to the value of it and wants double last year's prices. Then the sawmill man. He has not been making a fortune and thinks now he should share a little in the general prosperity

They say to us: "We must have so much for our trees and work." After a while it is "up to you." Don't kick. You don't suppose we have nerve enough to put up prices unless they had first been put up on us. No, indeed. But prices are NOT high. They have been to low and are just now getting reasonable. Children's Shoes.

In the choice of shoes for children, a spring sole, which is a shoe without a heel, is undoubtedly the best choice until the foot is fully developed. When the child is fourteen or fifteen years of age, she may put on a shoe with a slight heel, until she gradually becomes accustomed to the change. The shoe of the growing girl should be at least half an inch or more longer than the foot but should fit snugly at the sides, so that there will be no possible chance of the foot's slipping in the shoe. A shoe that does not fit comfortably at the beginning, so that the wearer can walk in it at once without any unpleasant sensation, is not a proper fit.

HOMES OF COMFORT

THE ART OF MAKING A FIRESIDE ATTRACTIVE.

It Is Not In Having Fine Things But Rather In Using the Things One Has Freely—Why Men Like the Club—Drifting Apart.

"No wonder a man enjoys his club," remarked one woman to another as they were taking advantage of "Ladies' Day" to inspect a new club house fro mthe roof to the swimming pool in the basement. "If I were a member I'd be here every night, wouldn't you?"

"Not if I had a nice home," retorted the other.

I listened and pondered.

I, too, had been revelling in the perfect appointments, feasting my eyes on the exquisite rugs, admiring the lovely woods and rare marbles, and, in fact, absorbing the artistic ensemble to my utmost capacity. Were I a member, I thought, the temptation to go often would be a very strong one.

This club house which is representative of the best New York can offer, not only because of the wealth but the intellectual attainments of its members, seems to me to typify two things merely comfort and congenial companionship.

From the instant the servant holds back the entrance door, the sense of comfort is pervasive. A cozy fireplace beyond a columned lobby suggests warmth and good cheer. Red, the masculine favorite, is the keynote of the decoration and furnishings of the building, various shades being used for the different rooms and the warm tones suggest welcome. All is bright and cheery. No lace curtains keep out a ray of light and the glare of the electric lights are softened by brilliant silk shades. Some of the walls are frescoed, others hung with leather or silk or burlap, or panelled from floor to ceiling with costly and beautiful wood.

Rare and valuable paintings adorn the walls, but there is not a single superfluous ornament; none of the little knicknacks that women think essential to the cosiness of a room. Everywhere are smoking parties for there is no woman around to object and the non-smokers have a room to themselves on the library floor. In the reading room and library, are books, papers and magazines, and all are so conveniently arranged that even the ordinary reader of books longs to sink into an easy chair and to be let alone.

With such attractions as these it is little wonder that many husbands use their own homes merely as places to eat and sleep. Of course, there is not so much of this in the country and I am wandering from my text. But the point is, if homes were more comfortable, using that word in the sense of being more easy, they would be more attractive to the male members of the family.

I fancy that one of the strongest attractions of the club is the fact that there is nothing too good in it to be used every day. This is not the case in many homes. We make ourselves and others uncomfortable in trying to keep rooms and furniture for company. The guest has a right to your best, but nothing in your home should be too good for you yourself to enjoy. If you have anything that is too good to use, it is too good to have. "Be it ever so humble, there is no place like home," but be it ever so fine there are many places better than home.

Then again, some of us like Mrs. Jellyby, are so occupied with movements for the alleged advancement of women in general, that we lose sight of commoplace duties, forget that Johnny's stockings need mending, or that Mary is backward in her arithmetic, or that poor dear William has dyspepsia and needs care in the choice and preparation of suitable foods. The other class goes to the other extreme, and while Johnny's stockings may be darned and the house kept spotless and shining, there is no intellectual glimmer in the home, and husband and children seek companionship wherever they can find it.

A young wife came to me the other day heartbroken because aside from their material interests, she and her husband had not a single taste in common. It is usually the wife who falls behind in the race, and her husband finds no intellectual enjoyment in her companionship. It is for the most part after the children are partly grown that the mother or father realizes that the cares of one or the other have caused them to drift apart.

AGNES OLCOTT.

What to Wear if Past Thirty.

Until a woman reaches the age of 30 she may wear just about what she pleases in regard to colors, style and shape of garments. After that age she must be more careful, and give a little thought to her complexion and figure before deciding upon her gowns. after 40 still more judgment is needed especially in colors. Well preserved women who desire to look young make a mistake when they array themselves in bright colors in the daytime. At night vivid tints may not be unbecoming, but worn in the sunlight they accentuate every mark of age.

Those who are inclined to be stout look puffed out, and those who are thin appear haggard when they wear bright pink, green or blue at a day entertainment. Nature teaches us a lesson in color which it would be well for us to heed. In early youth the light soft tints of spring; in early womanhood, the glowing hues of summer; in autumn, rich, dark tones; in winter, the pure white and gray shades that are in perfect harmony with old age.

To Pack Frocks Without Crushing.

Very many well meaning people entirely destroy both skirts and bodices by the way they pack them. To keep a skirt from creasing, fold to fit the tray, laying sheets of thin paper between each fold, and when you double the skirt together double the front over the back, never vice versa. Bodices and blouses should have tissue paper laid in over them, and a thin sheet inserted under lace or in the sleeves. Then put your skirts one on top of the other in the tray.

VANDERBILT'S INVENTION.

An Engine Equipped With the Millionaire's Firebox Put Through Its Paces.

Philadelphia Times.

Young Cornelius Vanderbilt, in his quiet, unobtrusive manner, came to this city Wednesday night and registered at the Bellevue. The object of his visit was to witness a practical test of his patent firebox for locomotives at Twenty-ninth and Popular streets. The test took place as scheduled and was eminently successful.

The test which Mr. Vanderbilt witnessed was on an engine of the Union Pacific Railroad. With Superintendent S. M. Vanclain, of the Baldwin Company, the young inventor entered the engineer's cab and the test began with a run northward. The run was made smoothly, the locomotive responding readily and reversing in excellent manner.

The firebox of locomotives in general use is wagon-shaped, and is surrounded by a boiler shell holding the water from which the steam is generated. It secures heating on the side and upward.

The Vanderbilt device consists of a cylindrical boiler shell, with a firebox of corrugated steel, three-quarters of an inch in thickness, which is also cylindrical in form. The bottom of the firebox is raised two inches above the floor of the boiler shell, permitting the water to circulate all around it.

MARS HILL CONFERENCE.

Christian Workers Assembled at This Mountain Town.

Correspondence of the Telegram.

Mars Hill, N. C., July 28.—The Mars Hill Conference for Christian Workers held its second meeting in the college chapel last night. The meeting was called to order by Prof. R. L. Moore, principal of Mars Hill College.

The address of the evening was delivered by Rev. Charles Brown, of Newport, Tenn., and was thoroughly enjoyed by all who were fortunate enough to be in attendance. His subject was "The Qualifications and Duties of Deacons," and the subject was well handled in a practical manner.

I regret to report the illness of our beloved and genial brother, Rev. B. W. Spilman, who was taken ill soon after returning from services last night. His smiling face and cheering words are sadly missed, but we trust he will soon be up again. Bro. Honeycutt, who has been confined to his room for some days is, I am happy to say, much better, and expects to be at work again soon.

Work on the new tabernacle is progressing rapidly.

Is There a Conspiracy Against the Old Soldiers?

Raleigh Post.

Why are so many fusion candidates for the Legislature denouncing the old Confederate soldiers? Is there a conspiracy among these people to repeal the pension laws, and deprive the old soldiers and their widows of the pittance now allowed them? Is this to be a feature of the "harmonious action" the Republicans and Butlerites have agreed upon in case they carry the Legislature? This outbreak, something not before experienced since the war, occurring in widely separate sections, would indicate a Butler fusion conspiracy against the noble old veterans. Watch the polls, and see that every friend of the old soldiers and of good government puts in a white man's ballot.

A Free Fair.

Danville, Va, is to have a free street fair and carnival, one solid week, October 1st to 6th, 1900. The project is in the hands of the Order of Elks. Reduced rates on all lines of travel to Danville will make it possible for many of our people to attend.

A Teachers' Institute.

A teachers' institute for Guilford county will be held in the courthouse next week, beginning Monday. It will be conducted by Prof. W. T. Whitsett, of Whitsett Institute, assisted by other educators of the county. The institute will be attended by the public school teachers generally of Guilford.

A disappointed editor has the following in a North Carolina newspaper:

"Three weeks ago we had the good fortune to have our left leg cut off by a train on the Shore Line road—running between here and the saw mill region. We fully expected to get big damages from the road, and pay off our debts with the same; but to our great sorrow, the miserable road went into the hands of a receiver three days afterward; and here we lie, with one leg gone and not cash enough on hand to buy a wooden one!"

WOMEN AND HOME

A Newspaper Holder.

Here is a strong, useful holder for newspapers or music. Any one can make the framework, which is of deal. Two uprights are made for each side, with a crossbar about three inches from the ends; one side should be made just a trifle narrower than the other so that it may be set inside the wider one, and firmly fixed by screws each side where the bars cross. Sandpaper the wood to make it quite smooth, paint and varnish as desired.

The ends are of art serge, cut the same depth as the opening, and wide enough to allow of a box-pleat; slope the ends down so that there is not much fulness at the lower part; fold the box-pleat and stitch it firmly, then nail inside the frame; cover the nails all along the edge with a piece of furniture gimp or braid. A rosette of ribbon ornaments each side where the uprights are joined.

Women As Census Enumerators.

Women will be employed both as enumerators and as clerks in the compilation of the census of 1900, and the bureau expects that numbers of them will apply for these positions. Women were first employed in this labor in 1880. In 1890 women again found occupation as clerks and as census takers, though then, as now, the fact that women were eligible to these positions was not as widely known as it should have been.

There are many reasons why this employment for women is most suitable. In the first place, as the work only lasts for a few weeks or months and then ceases absolutely, it has always been found difficult to find the best men for a labor which offers no permanency of support, while there many women so situated that they are glad to have the opportunity to earn a good sum of money in some occupation which will not take the whole of their time. The service is not severe, especially in cities and towns, where the dwellings are crowded together, and a person can work all day collecting the names of the inhabitants of a few blocks. Another point which deserves consideration is that the census enumerators as a rule sees only women in the homes which must be visited, as the calls are made during the hours when men are away on business.

The number of persons who will be employed in securing the facts for the census of 1900 reaches up into the tens of thousands. It is to be hoped that many women will find remuneration for their labor in this most suitable occupation.

Hints About Soup.

In making soups of all kinds, the slow, even, prolonged simmering, not boiling, must be observed as all-essential to the good result. The French say that the soup pot should only smile; that is, it should never show any bubbles on the surface, but should cook slowly, at an even heat just below the boiling point. It is because our cooks and housewives can not, or rather will not, understand this rule, that the soup of the average American household is a mere pretender to the name. It is not enough as certain blunderers seem to fancy, to keep the constituents of the broth hot for several hours; it must cook incessantly, never stopping for a moment's time. Furthermore, all the water needed for the soup should be put into it at the beginning; a serious loss of flavor is risked if more water has to be added during the process of cooking.

A Woman's Work.

It is not much over twenty years since a retired San Francisco teacher named Miss Austin conceived the idea that she could make the then barren plains of Fresno blossom like a rose and bear fruit abundantly. Under the inspiration of that belief she began the cultivation and curing of the raisin grape. As a direct result of the efforts of this woman Fresno county last year profited in one industry alone to the extent of $1,000,000, which is reported to be the value of the season's raisin-curing there. Almost all of the other industries which have since been developed in Fresno county have been the indirect outgrowth of the successful experiments made by Miss Austin in raisin-making.

Eton Jackets.

The illustration shows an Eton jacket for misses although it may be worn by adults. At present outside garments seem to be divided into two classes, the long coats with box backs and the smart Eton jackets. The latter are particularly effective when worn with the new box-plaited skirts, and the one illustrated combines attractive features, high collar, and broad revers. The jacket is close fitting at the back and reaches just to the waist line. To make it requires one and one quarter yards of material 54 inches wide.

Astonishing Facts.

In 1880 there were 2,600,000 women employed in this country, as shown by the census. In 1889 the number had grown to nearly 4,000,000. In a few decades at that rate of increase the number of women employed as wage earners will equal the number of men. But the facts are worse than they at first appear. Of that number the majority are between the ages of fourteen and twenty-five years. Women are most largely engaged in the mechanical and industrial trades. Sixteen per cent. of the boot and shoe makers are women, twenty-five per cent. of the cigar makers, forty-eight per cent. of the bookbinders, forty-eight per cent. of the carpet makers, forty-three per cent. of the hands in woolen mills, fifty-three per cent. in the cotton mills, seventy per cent. in the knitting mills, and out of the whole manufacturing work of the United States forty-five per cent. is done by women.

A good deal of interest is being displayed in the fungous carvings of Miss Ida Musselman of Johnstown, Pennsylvania. The pieces are in large and small size, and bring from $35 to $50. PROFIT IN IT.

Watercress Growing for Women Who Live Near Large Towns.

Watercress growing is a profitable industry for women who live near large towns, and who have running water at hand. The health of the plant depends upon an abundant, continuous current and a shallow stream. Without these the leaves become stunted, and the growth will not be plentiful. The best soil for it is gravelly loam on clay, because it retains the water, makes the bottom firm, and supplies sufficient nourishment. Cleaning and replanting should take place annually. This entails a good deal of expense, but it is necessary if one would obtain the full value of the beds.

In remaking the beds the upper sprigs of the cress are first gathered and put down in a convenient spot for replanting, sheltered from the wind and sun. The beds or dikes are then thoroughly cleaned out and the muddy soil removed with all the old roots, weeds and living creatures it contains. The bottom is then carefully leveled, and the stream allowed to flow, to thoroughly scour out all impurities, for a sufficient time. The replanting can now proceed. The cut cress is carefully laid down in rows or spread broadcast on the ground. The former plan admits of a steady flow of water. If seed is sown then it is advisable to do so where the water is sluggish, otherwise the force of the stream would carry away the greater part of the seeds sown. After the plants are laid down it will be necessary sometimes to make a dam of large stones where there is a danger of their being shifted from their position. The water is then let in sparingly at first, for fear of the plants being disturbed, until the young rootlets strike, which they will in the course of three or four days. In this way every brook, stream or ditch which has a strong current can be turned to account; it will only be necessary to see that the water ris sufficiently for the nourishment of the water-cress.

The water of the stream should be guarded with care, in order that it may not become contaminated.

Careful picking is necessary, and the front stems should be selected and gathered singly, two or three sprigs at a time. The more cautious this is done the sooner the bed will be ready for picking again.

Those parts of the plant that grow out of the water and have a brilliant dark color are the choicest. In preparing them for market it must be remembered that they are apt to heat and change color, and care should be taken to avoid this. It is best to pack the plants lightly in the centre of a basket, so as to leave an opportunity fr the air to circulate about them. But better than this is a basket with an air space in the middle. If sent a long distance a block of ice placed in the centre of the basket will keep the cress fresh.

WOMEN AND NERVES

HOW TO BE HAPPY THOUGH DELICATE.

Difference Between Nervousness and Dyspepsia—A Mild Form of Insanity—Value of Out-Door Air and Scenes—A Bundle of Hatreds.

Nervousness has been defined as that feeling which prompts a woman to burst into tears when, after ordering a poached egg in a restaurant, she is confronted with a fried one instead. says a writer in the New England Homestead. This perhaps is the great difference between nervousness and dyspepsia. A nervous woman weeps over a fried egg; a dyspeptic man picks it up and flings it at the head of the retreating waiter. That is to say, he flings it in imagination, and it is only by the greatest exercise of self-control that he refrains from doing so in fact. Nervousness is a mild form of insanity, in which reason spends most of her time in tottering on her throne, being unable apparently either to secure a firm seat or to step down and out altogether. The nervous woman is a bundle of hatreds. She detests the pattern of her carpet or wall paper. Her husband's little habit of screwing up his face, when he is carving the meat at dinner, makes him appear villianous in her eyes. When Tom drags a chair across the floor, or Susie says "I done it," she is ready to pounce on them and shake them till their milk teeth chatter. Most of the neighbors are depraved; the rest are clearly imbecile. Nobody understands her—her own people least of all. She remembers a hundred occasions in the past when she was manifestly treated with injustice, and her leisure moments are spent in relieving these harrowing scenes. Frequently the patient realizes and deplores her own childishness, but has not sufficient strength of will to overcome it.

The tearfulness which is so annoying a symptom in this malady—the hysterical conviction that one has got to cry profusely and immediately, and that no earthly power can save her—this can be relieved or prevented by simple means. Pouring cold water over the elbows and allowing it to run down to the wrist, or loosening the dress and gently pounding the body about the small of the back and abdomen with the clenched hands, are operations easily managed by the invalid herself, and invariably relieve nervous tension. But the cure of the disease requires more radical treatment.

Suppose at that time of the year when the farm work can be safely left in the hands of sons or cousins or the hired man, the husband of the nervous woman brings the horse to the door and invites her to take a drive. She utters a hundred objections, but he kisses her complaining lips into smiling though still doubtful acquiescence, and ties on her bonnet with his own kind, clumsy hands. They drive 17 miles and stop at a village tavern for dinner, and then drive 17 more miles and stop at another tavern for the night. A similar program is carried out the next day, and the next, and for as many days and weeks as the money for their simple expenses holds out. It matters not what direction they go in, so that it is far from home, and far from the beaten paths of housework and the roads and responsibilities and relatives that are too, too familiar. The invalid gets more fresh air in a day than she used to get in a month. The meals are not as good as those she cooks herself, but they are different and she doesn't have to think about them—these are the great points. No other woman she meets seems to be having as pleasant a time as she is having; no other woman's husband seems to be half as considerate as her own. They study the geography of their country, mead ow by meadow and concession by concession. It is better worth studying than the dust on the sideboard or the stains on the tablecloth. Occasionally they let the horse rest for an afternoon while they roam about the woods or go for a row on the river. The patience and peace of nature steal into her heart, and take possession of her life. At the end of the first week she feels so much younger that it is difficult to tell whether she is being eloped with or is on her wedding journey.

Out-of-door air and out-of-door scenes and out-of-door thoughts are the only cure for jaded nerves. A place of shelter is a very good and useful institution when viewed from the outside. The trouble with most of us nervous women is that we insist on accumulating too large a collection of interior views.

A Miner's Daughter.

Miss Catherine Clark, daughter of James Clark, formerly of Montana, now of New York, is lucky in material matters. Her father is worth a hundred millions or so, and the daughter is likely to make something of a stir in New York society when she gets good and ready.

One of the largest calibre guns with Lord Methuen's force, says a correspondent, is fondly known among the soldiers as "Milner's minimum," while another is equally popular under the title of "Methuen's maximum."

Fifty short, practical dairy rules for the production and handling of pure milk, printed on large cardboards, have been distributed by the tens of thousands among American farmers by the Bureau of Animal Industry.

Sir Henry M. Stanley was recently asked if he could find time to lecture in the United States on the topics suggested by the war in South Africa. He replied that his parliamentary duties would prevent his absence at this time.

Niagara power was used so long ago as 1725, when the French erected a saw mill near the site of the present factory of the Pittsburg Reduction Company. It was used for the purpose of supplying sawed lumber for Fort Niagara.

A central station for the production of acetylene gas is being tested at Tata-Tovoros, Hungary, a city of 12,000 inhabitants. Five miles of pipe covers the city and furnishes gas to 158 street lights and 250 burners in houses.

Clouds that move in a contrary direction to that of the surface current indicate a change of weather, because they prove the existence of two air currents, one warm and the other cold, and the mingling of these frequently causes rain.

NO RIGHT TO UGLINESS

The woman who is lovely in face form and temper will always have friends, but one who would be attractive must keep her health. If she is weak, sickly and run down, she will be nervous and irritable. If she has constipation or kidney trouble, her impure blood will cause pimples blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. Electric bitters is the best medicine in the world to regulate stomach, liver and kidneys and to purify the blood. It gives strong nerves, bright eyes, smooth, velvety skin, rich complexion. It will make a good-looking, charming woman of a run-down invalid. Only 50 cents at C. E Holton's drug store.

THE HANDY WOMAN.

How She Makes Herself Useful On All Occasions.

A new activity for the American working woman has been developed. This time it is the "handy woman." There is no limit to the things she can do, from decorating a dinner table to mending clothes and darning stockings. Whatever needs to be done she can do, and she is always ready for work.

Women send to her at the eleventh hour, and it is rarely indeed that she fails them. On one occasion she was wired for at noon to find a poor little woman almost in tears intending to give a dinner party that evening and finding five or six of her most necessary china and glass table decorations broken.

There was no good china shop within reach, and the unfortunate hostess was contemplating the dismal failure of her festivity. But the handy woman had her wits about her. Searching the depleted china closet she found enough to make an artistic arrangement.

In the middle of the table was placed an oblong piece of brocade of a soft grayish green tint edged with a fluffy frill of chiffon to match, and on this was a Wedgwood bowl in that soft shade of powdery blue for which this ware is famous.

On the four corners of the table were four small bowls to match. These five pieces were filled with white Japanese anemones and their dark green foliage. Some small heart-shaped trinket-boxes purloined from the drawing-room cabinet were used as bonbonnieres. A special messenger to a good stationer's shop brought back a packet of Wedgwood menu cards, just to give the finishing touch.

On one occasion the handy woman had to contrive out of nothing an elegant table. She was busy in a new house, helping the tenants get "settled," when a telegram came announcing that a severe, critical and wealthy maiden aunt proposed dining with her dear nephew and niece that very day.

To refuse her would be suicidal, and to let her sit down to anything but a well ordered dinner would put her into the worst of tempers.

The handy woman promptly marched out into the fields (the house was in the suburbs) and collected an armful of scarlet berries, some tinted blackberry leaves and feathery grasses. With these and six soup plates, containing the tumblers were placed side by side in the middle and lightly filled with berries, grasses and tinted leaves. One long bramble with its leaves and berries was bent over to form an arch from one tumbler to another. The other four soup plates were piled high with apples, pears, plums and nuts, the rims of the plates being hidden with leaves.
